STRANGE TALE OF TWO RINGS

Brought Bad Luck to Three Successful Wearers.

FIGHT WITH THE NEZ PERCES.

Captain Logan was Killed and Red Skin Cut Off Fingers to Obtain Rings, Which Two Indians Afterwards Surrendered.

On a grassy slope of the big Hole Valley stands a plain granite monument bearing the following inscription:

ON THIS FIELD SEVENTEEN OFFICERS AND ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHT MEN OF THE SEVENTH U. S. INFANTRY, UNDER ITS COLONEL, BRUYET MAJOREN, JOHN GIBSON, WITH EIGHT OTHER SOLDIERS AND THIRTY-SIX CITIZENS, SURVIVED AND FOUGHT ALL DAY A SUPERIOR FORT OF THE NEZ PERCES IN THE MOUNTAINS.

This monument was erected, as an inscription on the south face reads, to the memory of the soldiers and citizens who here fell in battle with the Nez Perces on August 8, 1877.

It was in May, 1877, that the Nez Perces, under their war leader, Chief Joseph, first began to make trouble for the scattering and defenceless settlers in the Washington and Idaho territory.

PREPARED FOR WAR. The Crees, a half-breed, Mexican who was in the camp trading with them, at once prepared for a fight.

At last it began to grow light in the east, until one could see the light of his gun. One of the sleepers arose, stirred up the fire and threw on some fresh fuel.

ON THE TRAIL. Gen. Gibbon arrived at Fort Missoula on August 31, and on the 4th the whole outfit started on the trail of the Indians.

The pack mules were left behind, and in the place a wagon train and a couple of howitzers were taken. Knowing that Gen. Howard was far in their rear, the Nez Perces had been in no hurry to get across the range, never dreaming that by means of the telegraph other soldiers could be put on their trail.

The Indians were finally overtaken, and a desperate fight followed. The children on the Nez Perces' camp, the Indians were taken by surprise, but rallied after gaining shelter, and the fight went on all night and the next day. Then the Indians, having sent their women and horses on ahead, ceased firing and continued their flight.

One of the first men killed in this battle was Capt. William Logan. When the Indians charged back into their camp he had a hand-to-hand struggle with a big warrior and killed him. The warrior's sister grabbed the pistol of her good brother and shot the Captain in the brain.

At the time of Captain Logan's death he wore two rings. One, a large gold ring, was a design of a bear's paw, which had been in his family for about four hundred years. The other was a head band of gold, on which was enamelled the insignia of the Royal Arch Masons.

When the dead warrior was buried these rings were not to be found, nor the fingers on which he had worn them. They would not slip off easily, and the Indians, in order to get them, had severed the fingers at the knuckles. His water-buffalo coat, which he wore, was also cut off the body, and in due time sent to Mrs. Logan and her children, then residing in Helena. They never expected to see the rings again, but they were eventually recovered, and in a most peculiar manner.

FOUR DAYS' FIGHT. After the battle of the Big Hole, the Nez Perces were pursued by Gen. Miles, who overtook them near the Bear Paw Mountains in eastern Montana. There, in a five-day fight, they were finally driven to a point where, most of the warriors dead, the rest perishing from cold and hunger, Chief Joseph surrendered. One small band escaped, however, and crossed the border into Canada.

It was in the fall of 1877, that the Nez Perces, under their war leader, Chief Joseph, first began to make trouble for the scattering and defenceless settlers in the Washington and Idaho territory.
